TACCONI-MOORE

A pioneer in the world of manual therapy with knowledge that goes far beyond the four walls that house your primary care physician, Gina Tacconi-Moore spends her time answering mystery pain with the motto:

it’s mobility.”

AS AN ACCOMPLISHED CLINICIAN AND BUSINESSWOMAN, Gina has been running her own practice, The Treatment Room, in all of its iterations since 2013. Aside from working as a member of the medical staff for CrossFit Regionals from 2013 to 2018, she is a renowned consultant for high profile sports organizations and clients nationwide including the NFL, MLB, and PGA. Gina’s unique approach to pain management and relief is rooted not only in her copious manual therapy certifications, but also in her extraordinary prosection work. Gina was a part of the Fascial Net Plastination Project team at the PLASTINARIUM lab in Guben, Germany that prepared the world’s first plastinated model of the human fascial system.

Even with this impressive roster, Gina still finds time to pursue her own love for strongman, literature, and the art of interior design. There’s truly never a dull day in Denton County, Texas where she lives with her husband, Alexander, and their dog, Dorian.

QUESTION SUGGESTIONS

- » What is Manual Therapy and how did you become an expert in it?
- » What has becoming an expert in dissection taught you about the human body? How does that translate into your approach for patient care?
- » Can you share a story about a patient that was “unhealable” and how manual therapy healed them?
- » You say that all people are actually made up of 3 unique bodies, not one. Can you explain?
- » You say that conditions like incontinence, ED, and constipation can be improved in as little as 4 sessions of manual therapy - how can you be sure? What are the changes that people can expect to see?
- » Why do we need to make the shift from “alternative healthcare options” to an integrated holistic approach to combat the “sick care” system?
